Her Name Upheld by Chanceller Merritt, and the Repudiators' Injunction "Knocked Higher'n a Kite."

Last Wednesday, at Nashville, Chancellor Merritt dissolved the 100-3 injunction bill succe out by Henry J. Lynn and others against Marsh T. Polk and the other members of the funding board, and dismissed the bill for want of equity on its face. And here ends the second act of the vain endeavors of the demagogues and repudiators of the proud old Volunteer State to defeat the will of a majority of the people, and loster the disgrace and ignominy of a dishonorable settlement or no settlement at all upon

The efforts of her patriotic citizens to pay her honest obligations and to place her where she justly belongs-among the proudest and wealthiest states of the nationhave now been recognized by the courts of the land. This news will be received with the greatest joy and satisfaction by all her good eitizens. Long had the people wanted and strugged for a final settlement of the vexatious question, and when the present legislature wisely and patriotically settled it, at the best terms obtainable, their constituents were satisfied. LOCATION OF THE BALL.

Fifty millions of people have read with the greatest solicitude and inerest, during the past two weeks, very particle of news coming from the bedside of the wounded president, and yet, who knows anything about the range or location of the murderous missile. This, of course would be interesting to the common in plain "United States talk" and let us inquisitive plebelans known how and where the president was shot. The following is a pretty fair sample of the mysterious medical man's intelligent impartation of knowledge, on the subject, to mystifled I pencil pushers. In answer to a request for an explanation of the nature of the wound, the doctor said: The line of incidence pursued by the ball to the point of impact against the fractured rib forms, with front of the body, would form, with the same line of incidence, an acute angle. Hence, it is fair to infer, ceteign will be delighted to hear this. All, to his mind is now-clear, whereas before, "all was as dark as was
